Dear Yotam Rosenbaum and the Answer.ky Team,

My name is Michael Leontieff and I'm a final year Computer Science Student at QUT who would like to formally express interest in the available roles in your engineering team.

Throughout my degree, I have become a jack of all trades, garnering a broad range of skills encompassing Desktop, Mobile and Web development. Considering this, your GitHub careers document outlines the need for people to fill various roles in your company, and I believe I would a valuable addition to the team by filling the fourth, "Jack of all trades" role. Whilst you were initially searching for people to fill paid positions, and I'm currently not versed in the technology stack you're using I believe I can still be beneficial to your team through an un-paid internship-type role, as I have experience in both front and backend development using frameworks and architecture patterns outlined in my resume. In an unpaid role, I could introduce my broad skillset to your company whilst also eagerly and promptly learning the current technology stack that you employ to further push the bounds of what your company can achieve.

I understand that you represent a developing company, and I would like to assure you that my presence within your team will not cause a distraction, and that my eagerness to apply my skills and learn new ones would only benefit a start-up such as yours.

If this is something you're willing to consider then don't hesitate to contact me, I've included my Academic Transcript and CV if you wish to gain a more detailed understanding of my skillset.

Thank you for your consideration,

Michael Leontieff - Smith
